Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Saturday 04 Sep 2021

UK Outlook for Thursday 9 Sep 2021 to Saturday 18 Sep 2021:
The bulk of the UK is likely to turn more unsettled with a likelihood of showers at times, and these could turn heavy or thundery in places with a risk of localised torrential downpours. Outside of showers, periods of drier and sunnier weather are still a possibility, and these are most likely to be longest lived across eastern areas. For northwestern parts of the UK, alongside these showers, some more prolonged and heavier spells of rain are possible. Later in the period into mid-September, confidence is fairly low, but the unsettled theme will probably continue. Temperatures are likely to be above average throughout, with some areas perhaps feeling warm or even very warm at first.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.